Fisher College, Boston, Massachusetts, August 2019 – December 2019

Adjunct Instructor of History: Responsibilities include designing and teaching the course U.S. History since 1877. The course covered many themes across American history, and encouraged the students to engage with different types of sources and in historical discussion. Students are asked to complete a podcast project as their final exam.

Course Taught: US History Since 1877

Boston College, Department of Communication, Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, January 2018 – August 2019

Co-Lecturer: Responsibilities include designing and instructing the Entertainment Media course at Boston College with Dr. Matt Sienkiewicz. Students learn about the history of broadcasting, radio, television, film, and the inner-workings of the creative process of screenwriting, filmmaking, podcasting, and the creative process behind entertainment media. The course features weekly television/film screenings, readings, and online discussion posts to help facilitate a better learning environment and discussion in the classroom.

Quinnipiac University, Department of History, Hamden, CT, August 2016 – May 2017

Adjunct Instructor of History: Responsibilities included designing and instructing introductory US History courses, “US History to 1877” and “US History from Reconstruction” through the use of primary sources and discussion-based learning. The essence of my teaching philosophy combines interactive lectures and student input. Each of my classes contains presentations and debates in the core curriculum. Primary documents and speeches are also a key component of my syllabus construction as well as employing technology such as PowerPoint presentations, discussion boards on Blackboard Learn, and electronic sources.

Courses Taught: US History to 1877

US History from Reconstruction

Southington Public Schools, Southington, CT, May 2014 – June 2017
